

Designer: Abi Robinson

My name is Abi Robinson, I am a textiles student and the designer and maker of this dress. My original inspiration for the dress was the Inuit culture and I did a lot of research into the culture and typical attire of the Intuits. I soon realised I wished to focus on the beautiful ice land they live on, I then drew many designs in blue and white silk. I eventually decided on this design and am very proud of the result. I found the beading and hand hemming very time consuming and sometimes frustrating but think it was worth it as I feel the final product is of a high quality that I am very pleased with.

Lottie Hutchinson said “I think this is an amazing dress and has a clear connection with Inuit culture. My favourite part of this dress is the top blue section and the way the bow is presented. I would definitely buy this dress and it is a great achievement for Abi.”

Alana Skilbeck said “I think Abi’s dress is made to a very high standard and you can tell that she has worked really hard and enjoyed making it overall. I love the theme and colour of the dress and it suits the Inuit culture. She should be very proud of her work😊”
